Fire Compliance: The Fire Risk Assessment and Beyond...

Background

Several years ago, fire legislation throughout the United Kingdom entered a new regime of self-compliance. The Regulatory Reform (Fire Safety) Order 2005 commonly known as the RRO of FSO was introduced in 2006 and represents the most significant change to the governance of fire safety for over 50 years.

The overarching obligation is to achieve and sustain Compliance with the Fire Regulations. The 'Responsible Person', otherwise known as the 'Duty Holder' maybe the Business Owner/Employer, Occupier, Landlord/Owner or Lead Contractor, the Person having overall Control of the Building. Each organisation will have a 'Duty Holder' who has the task of providing sufficient evidence to demonstrate compliance is in operation.

Enforcement responsibilities are the domain of the respective Fire Authority with their prime role being to guide organisations to achieve broad compliance with the Fire Regulations. Yet, it is hardly known that a much higher level of compliance is required.

During the last 3-5 years, unprecedented levels of Enforcement Action has been taken with Courts issuing significant awards including unlimited fines and custodial sentences.

Are you compliant?

If you have any doubts, come along to this presentation for a 'Peace of Mind' second opinion from specialists in the field.

Course content:

- Aims and Objectives of the RRO
- Key Responsibilities of the Duty Holder – What does it mean to be Compliant
- Choosing a Competent Fire Risk Assessor
- The Solution – 4 Simple Steps for Compliance to be Assured

Objectives:

- Attendees to have a clear understanding of their Life Safety responsibilities
- Provide clarity as to what is required for Compliance to be evidenced
- Enable organisations to 'Achieve and Sustain' compliance with the RRO
